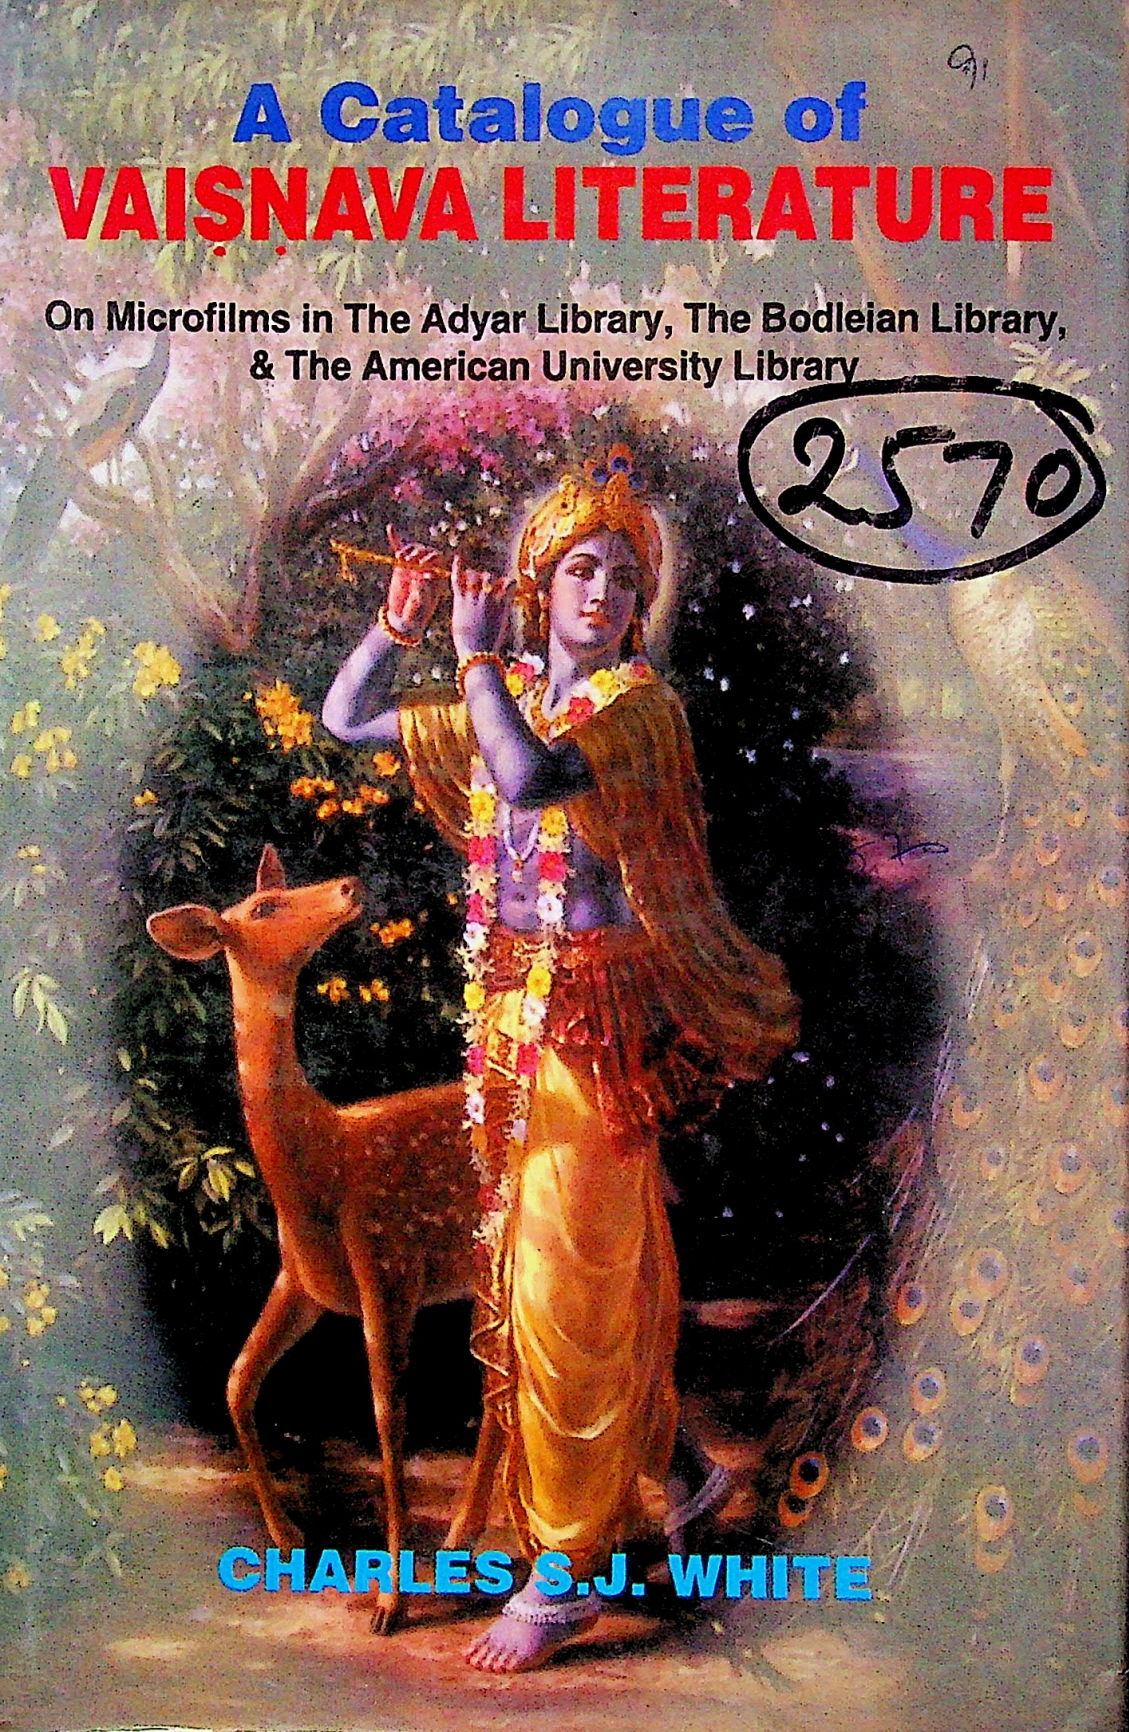
A Catalogue of VAIṢṆAVA LITERATURE

On Microfilms in The Adyar Library, The Bodleian Library, & The American University Library



CHARLES S.J. WHITE

The tragic loss of precious, ancient or old copies of writings from India's religious heritage continues into the twenty-first century. When we undertook this microfilm project in the early 1980s, our specific task in the field was to film rare books and manuscripts of the Rāmānuja, Madhva, Nimbārka, Vallabha, and Gauḍīya traditions, as well as texts of other Sampradāyas and individual authors. Our purpose was to try to preserve at least a representative group of such writings, otherwise bound to destruction through lack of proper conservation. A small team of photographers and researchers spent a total of eighteen months in India, locating, identifying and photographing numerous hand-printed, paper and palm-leaf manuscripts as well as some printed editions from the Vaiṣṇava traditions.

It is on the basis of this collection, that we have selectively developed the present Vaiṣṇava Literature Catalogue: Microfilms in the Adyar Library, the Bodleian Library and the American University Library.

A CATALOGUE OF VAIṢṆAVA LITERATURE

The reader should note that the following roll (reel) numbers from the original collection, due to technical difficulties, were not included in the present Catalogue: 8 through 30; 64 through 77; 79 through 90; and roll "C". They are housed together with the original microfilms of the complete collection in the Archives of the American University Bender Library in Washington, D.C., USA. It is our hope that these priceless writings from India's religious heritage may eventually be retrieved and made accessible through digital enchancement. Thereafter, a supplemental Catalogue can be produced if there is scholarly interest in doing so.

PREFACE

The Materials presented here form a part of the original Vaiṣṇava Literature Conservation Project, funded by a grant from the Smithsonian Institution and the Institute for Vaiṣṇava Studies. Dr. Graham M. Schweig, Ph.D., Director, Indic Studies Program; Associate Professor of Religious Studies; Senior Editor, Journal of Vaishnava Studies, Department of Philosophy and Religious Studies, Christopher Newport University, Virginia, while still a graduate student, together with colleagues, originated the proposal to the Smithsonian Institution that began this endeavour. Mr. Gregory Jay (Gaurakeshava) was the Operations Manager in India. Francine Berkowitz directed the South Asia grants of the Smithsonian Institution. The total extent of the present Catalogue includes 1679 entries. The organization of the files and the preparation of the first entries in the Catalogue received support from the American Institute of Indian Studies and the Institute for Vaiṣṇava Studies. We wish to express special thanks to the Director General of the American Institute of Indian Studies, Dr. Pradeep Mehendiratta, for supplementary financing. Our deep appreciation goes to Mrs. Radha Burnier, International President of the Theosophical Society, and to Mrs. Parvati Gopalaratnam, the Librarian of the Adyar Library, for allowing us to deposit a complete set of the microfilms in the Adyar Library and to carry out the organization of the files (numbering twenty-five volumes, and the immediate source of the Catalogue), the printing from the microfilm reader-printer, and preliminary work connected with the preparation of the Catalogue. Thanks are also due to the Honorary Director of the Adyar Library, Dr. K.K. Raja for his support of this work. Dr. William Deadweiler and Mr. Robert Cohen made special contributions to creating the Catalogue project. Mr. R. Laxman and Ms. K. Jayasree, and other members of the Adyar Library staff, were of great assistance in the preparation of the Catalogue files. We thank Dr. V.K. Chari for his help in Telugu consultation. Mr. S. Venkatesh, in-charge of the computer section of the Adyar Library, and Mr. Christopher Raj gave indispensable aid in the printing of the Catalogue draughts. Our deepest thanks go to Srimati Savitridasi, who created the diacritical marks for the typing of the Catalogue and, also, provided the alphabetized index. Thanks to Gopiparanadhana Dasa for his assistance in formatting the diacritical text. We appreciate, too, the cooperation of The American University Librarian Ms. Patricia A. Wand and The Archivist Mr. George D. Arnold, assisted by Mr. Ignacio Moreno and Mr. Christopher Lewis of Media Services. Thanks go also to Dr. Gillian Evison and Ms. Lesley Forbes, of the Bodleian Library of Oxford University, for their assistance in making the microfilms available in the United Kingdom. I also express my thanks to Mr. Shaunaka Rishi Das of the Oxford Centre for Vaiṣṇava and Hindu Studies for his cooperation and to Dr. Allen W. Thrasher, Senior Reference Librarian of the Southern Asian Section of the Library of Congress, who kindly agreed to review the Catalogue.

The work rendered by Dr. S. Jayasree in annotating and Mr. S.A. Lokesh in transcribing data on the microfilms in this Catalogue was of utmost importance. The microfilm titles, listed in the Catalogue, are available for consultation in the Libraries, as mentioned in the front of the book.

INTRODUCTION*

I

The purpose of the Catalogue of Vaiṣṇava Literature aims to preserve the literatures of Vaiṣṇava traditions and make them accessible to scholars in India and the West through microfilm technology. Although this project is still in progress, I would like to present to you at this time what the project is, what it involves, and what we have achieved.

The Vaiṣṇava Literature Microfilm Project came to be known by the nickname, "The Matsya Project." As you know, the Matsya, incarnation of Kṛṣṇa, is described in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa as having saved the Vedas from the waters of devastation. We cannot claim to be engaged in such an ambitious project as the one Matsyāvatāra undertook. However, we hope that this project will contribute to the preservation of some of India's great spiritual literature, and increase the knowledge and appreciation of India's culture and ancient civilization.

Since this is a conference to celebrate the life and work of A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada, Founder-Ācārya of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, let me make a few references at this point as to how he might relate to this project, arising, as it did, originally from the Institute for Vaiṣṇava Studies, an ISKCON- inspired organization.

In this connection I remember my first contact with the devotees of Swami Prabhupada in Philadelphia in the late

* The Introduction was originally prepared as a Conference Paper, Autumn 1995. It does not completely reflect the state of the materials discussed–in the present time period. Nevertheless, it does give historical background to date.

1960s. In a store-front temple in Philadelphia's Center City I saw for the first time the Hari-Kṛṣṇa style manifested. I and my students came for the evening āratī. We observed the pūjā, the chanting and dancing. We ate a sampling of the temple prasād and we listened to a lecture by the youthful temple leader on a Hindu text—I believe it was the Bhagavad Gītā. The memorization of the sacred text, the expounding of an authoritative commentary, and a more personal exegesis of the import of the text for one's life: these were notable elements to observe in that formative period of ISKCON life and, I believe, have developed and flourished in the subsequent generations. Indeed, ISKCON devotees have studied for baccalaureate, masters' and doctors' degrees on the basis of their introduction to the rich intellectual tradition of India in the daily life of an ISKCON temple. Hence, the intellectual character of Bhaktivedanta's movement was evident from the very beginning. It could scarcely be otherwise, given the high-caste modalities of the ISKCON movement, and the models of sampradāya organization from which ISKCON arose—and with which, in a sense, it competed.

Sanskrit literacy and competency are among the hallmarks of high-status identity in the Hindu religious milieu. From the point of view of the Western devotees in the movement, the challenge of Sanskritization fitted the counter-culture origins of ISKCON in a very positive way. As any student knows, the mastery of a literature—all the better if it is memorized as well—is normally an irrevocable possession that helps one define one's own competence and intellectual self-worth, not only for one's self but as against the other.

All of the historical Vaiṣṇava sampradāyas developed great depth of knowledge and interpretive sophistication not only in the teachings of their own ācāryas—though that was of major importance—but also, in varying degrees, of other viewpoints. As well as argumentation of theological points, there was no doubt cross-fertilization in this process. Swami

Prabhupada recognized this himself, for example in his commentary on Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-Līlā 2. 95 he wrote:

> A Vaiṣṇava should study the commentaries on Vedānta-Sūtra written by the four sampradāya-ācāryas, namely Śrī Rāmānujācārya, Mādhvācārya, Viṣṇusvāmī and Nimbārka, for these commentaries are based upon the philosophy that the Lord is the master and that all living entities are His eternal servants. One interested in studying Vedānta philosophy properly must study these commentaries, especially if he is a Vaiṣṇava. These commentaries are always adored by Vaiṣṇavas.

In his day-to-day contact with his close disciples, Swami Prabhupada was asked questions regarding the study of the whole corpus of Vaiṣṇava literature. The above quotation could be matched by others in which he advised the study of all of the Vaiṣṇava Vedānta teachers and teachings. In respect to the present project, it was Swami Prabhupada's wish that at some time in some format, a university should arise in which the Vedānta philosophy would be the focus of the curriculum, leading up to the granting of a Ph.D. degree. His original thought, I believe, was that this university would be located in Mayapur and be incorporated into the University of Calcutta system.

Even if that particular idea was modified, it became evident in those discussions that one could not have a university program without a significant library. The Mātsya project, the founding of the Institute for Vaiṣṇava Studies and the undertaking of the Vaiṣṇava Literature Conservation Projects, with external funding and external academic cooperation, were and are the steps taken in that direction although of necessity with a wider application than the boundaries per se of the Bhaktivedanta Sampradāya.

With so much else going on in the ISKCON movement, including the death of the Ācārya Founder and subsequent retrenchment and reorganization, the goal of an independent academic entity at the highest level may have been obscured but not forgotten. My own recruitment into these projects was a kind of link in the chain of circumstances described above. Dr. William Deadweiler (Ravindra Swarupa Dasa) translated the concept of the university into that of an Institute for Vaiṣṇava Studies on american soil. From him (now) Dr. Graham Schweig (Garuda Dasa) became the actual agent for the foundation of the Institute. My role became that of academic sponsor and liaison between the religious and academic communities, but with the preponderance of my responsibility the professionally academic one, which brings me to the discussion I would like to present here today.

II

When we undertook the photographic work in the early 1980s, our specific task in the field was to photograph rare books and manuscripts from the Rāmānuja, Mādhva, Nimbārka, Vallabha, and Gauḍīya traditions, as well as works of other sampradāyas and individual authors. A small team of photographers and researchers spent a total of eighteen months working in India, locating, identifying and photographing numerous hand-printed, paper and palm-leaf manuscripts as well as some printed editions from these Vaiṣṇava traditions. These works were found in the collections of traditional Vaiṣṇava families, monasteries and academic institutions. In many cases these collections were very extensive. But even in the small collections, there had to be a specific way of determining what was to be filmed.

Private collections included that in the possession of Dr. K.T. Pandurangi, former head of the Sanskrit Department of the Bangalore Jñānabhāratī University. We also photographed at the Parimala Research and Publishing house near Bangalore. I photographed in the Mādhva religious centers at Udipi in the Pejwar, Palimar, Puttige and Krishnapura Maṭhs and also at the Udipi Sanskrit College. We photographed at the Rāmānujite centers in Melkote at the Sanskrit College and the Academy of Sanskrit Research. We also did extensive microfilming in the Oriental Manuscript Library in Mysore and the Government Oriental Manuscript Library in Madras (Chennai) and in the Dr. Swaminatha Iyer Library in Madras (Chennai) and at the Vrindavan Research Institute in Vrindaban.

In the first few months of the field work, during which time the actual needs and requirements of the project became clear, we developed and refined practical and scholarly procedures for determining which texts to film for accomplishing the ultimate goal of making these literatures accessible. Here the term "accessible" is key; for it is on a conception of "accessibility" that the method of research and evaluation was developed. "Accessibility" here refers to three different levels of achieving access to literary works: the first was to identify and locate endangered Vaiṣṇava works; the second was to analyze the degree of accessibility of the texts found; and the third was to microfilm and present the works in easily available microforms. We eventually adopted the term "conservation" to indicate the overall goal of the microfilming project.

Identifying works of the subject field of literature is the first level. Such identification required consultation with librarians and scholars who knew the specific works of a tradition thoroughly, in order to form a comprehensive bibliography and to determine the location of these works. We referred to the identification of the individual works within a particular tradition as the "breadth" of a tradition's literature.

Exactly where the Vaiṣṇava field of literature ends and the literature of the Hindu complex of religious traditions begins is, of course, not precise; for the Vaiṣṇava traditions are inextricably a part of the cultural context within which they are found. However, some works within a tradition have more historical and philological importance than others, and some have more religious and philosophic significance. In addition to these types, there are texts which are not immediately within the boundaries of the tradition, but which are essential for understanding the texts proper to the tradition.

The team in the field kept a master search list which not only identified the works of particular traditions and their various locations, but also indicated priorities for filming. Therefore, a system of classifying works, according to their relation with the tradition, was devised as the first level in the evaluation of texts. In consultation with the Indian experts, the letter symbols "A", "B" and "C" were assigned to the texts on the search list.

"A" works represented that part of the literature which formed the foundation, or nucleus of a tradition. Such works stand out in the literary history of a sect, and are regarded by the members of the sect as the most important. An "A" work is most likely to have been well-preserved by the tradition. Therefore, filming of multiple editions in the "A" category might be less urgent than those in the "B" category, except in the cases where an additional edition is determined to be particularly important, or when previously unknown or undiscovered "A" works are found.

"B" works are not as central as "A" works, but, as we mentioned, are not necessarily less important. They are frequently discussions and elaborations of the ideas in "A" works. This category of works is usually the largest in any tradition, and although they may be considered by the sect as less important than the "A" works, they are often essential texts for understanding the history of the sect as well as other important historical data. The "B" works of the Vaiṣṇava traditions are the least known and have been the most neglected.

"C" works lie outside the tradition, but are needed to understand the "A" and "B" works. These will usually be classical texts, viz certain purāṇas, upaniṣads and vedāṅgas, which are often presented with sectarian commentaries, or works from other schools of thought to which an "A" or "B" work is a development or a response.

The second level of evaluating the accessibility of Vaiṣṇava texts requires that we identify the different editions of a particular work. Since the number of works in any tradition is greatly increased by the number of varying editions that one finds for each work, and since it is impossible to film every edition of every work, considerations had to be given to the variations between editions and to what made one edition more desirable than another. The number of editions and variations of a particular work are what we refer to as the "depth" of a tradition's literature. Of course, it would be ideal to record every edition as well as every scrap of every work to aid scholars in putting together critical editions. But this was beyond the means of the present project.

Editions of works vary greatly. Age, authenticity, language, script, legibility, physical condition, and form constituted the different factors by which one edition could be evaluated as more accessible—and hence, more "conserved"—than another edition.

All of the variables under each of these seven accessibility or conservation factors are in an order of preference. If a manuscript were judged to be very old and close to the original, this made for better conservation. The language and/or script in which the text was found, the exact content or authenticity of the work, the age, legibility, etc., all had to be considered together to determine the accessibility of each work. In some cases, however, several editions of a work were filmed, e.g., the Bhāgavata Purāṇa.

The practical issue arises as to how these various factors of conservability could be determined by any one scholar, for there were thousands of possible works from various sects within the Vaiṣṇava tradition, which were spread all over India and found in numerous languages and scripts. To be guided in these crucial questions of accessibility, the field methodology included collaboration with expert Indian academic and Vaiṣṇava scholars. It was with their assistance and knowledge that accessibility factors were analyzed.

The third level of achieving access and conservation had to do with the technical microphotographic procedures. (I wish to set aside, for the moment, the technicalities of the cameras and films themselves, the variations in voltage, the failure of electricity, the use of portable generators and the like, as not germane to my purpose here today.) I would like to sketch a picture for your imagination or mind's eye of the step-by-step procedures in the field work:

1. The Field Director consulted with scholars to define the breadth of the tradition's writings, and he began to form a comprehensive bibliography, to which more works might be added as the work proceeded. On this search list, the location, the importance, and the "breadth" category "A", "B", or "C" was indicated.
2. The next step was to gain permission from the proprietors of collections for filming—in some cases government officials—and to research the holdings in such collections if there were no catalogue.
3. With the help of a pandit/scholar (in many cases the librarian of the collection), we compiled a working bibliography of the particular collection to determine the quality of various editions, i.e., the depth analysis and which of those texts should be filmed.
4. The Operations Manager, Mr. Gregory Jay (Gaurakeshava), travelled with the photographic team to the site of filming, installed the equipment, made living arrangements for the team personnel, and scheduled times for filming.
5. The project's bibliographer worked closely with the local pandit, taking down all the basic bibliographic informations and entering it onto the project's bibliographic record sheet.
6. The bibliographer established a bibliographic control number for the text and entered it onto the bibliographic record sheet. This control number, which indicated the tradition, author, work, edition and number of the microfilm roll, was helpful to the present task of creating the finite catalogue.

7. The pandit checked the manuscript for any missing pages, as well as to see that the pages were in correct order. If there were any unusual aspects observed by the pandit, then the bibliographer made note of them on the record sheet.
8. The bibliographer gave the microfilm photographer the bibliographic record sheet along with the manuscript to be filmed. The bibliographic record was photographed first, then each folio of a manuscript, or the opened two pages of a book, were filmed.
9. The photographer had the task of turning the folios or pages for long hours. He checked again for irregularities in the folio or page order. Simultaneously he made sure that the thickness of the book or pile of manuscript folios remained within the depth-of-field range of the camera. He also was concerned to watch the fluctuation of the electrical current as indicated in the camera stabilizer.
10. While the photographer filmed, the bibliographer registered the author and title of the work being filmed, along with its control number in an alphabetically arranged card catalogue. This catalogue contained all the works filmed, and was checked for previously filmed materials to prevent unnecessary duplication. Then the bibliographer, with the aid of the librarian, began to prepare the next text to be filmed. In the case of palm-leaf manuscripts—once we had discovered the technique, somewhat late in the first year of the project—preparation might entail oiling each individual palm-leaf to make the script more visible to the camera by producing a greater contrast between the script and its background.
11. The bibliographer also kept a master author list, which was simply an easy reference list of all the bibliographic control numbers which have been assigned to different authors. Each time the work of a new author was filmed, the new author number was registered on this list.

12. After the day's filming, the equipment had to be stored safely. Often the on-site librarian or pandit helped with this and other security aspects of the filming work.
13. The operations manager directed the above procedures, attempted to solve the problems which arose, and improved the overall efficiency of the work. When rolls of film were completed, he developed the films.
14. The operations manager inspected the films to determine whether there were "major" or "minor" defects in the work, which could be of three kinds: defects from human error, from technical photographic problems, or from problems in the processing of film.
15. When twenty rolls of film had been developed and inspected, they were delivered to the field director who dispatched them to the U.S. (in those days via the diplomatic pouch) for further editing, bibliographic organization and other archival work. This was the final step in the field work. (I am indebted to [then] Mr. Graham Schweig for aspects of the conceptualization of Part II.)

III

Ten years passed. In the interval the Smithsonian grant was renewed at about $50,000.00, which would have enabled us to photograph a considerably larger number of Vaiṣṇava works. However, due to a change in Government of India regulations as applied to this project, we were not able to renew Government of India authorization at that time. Smithsonian kept our funds aside for some time, but eventually they were applied to other projects.

In 1992 I made a brief trip to India and met with Dr. Pradeep Mehendiratta, Director General of the American Institute of Indian Studies. He suggested that the time might be propitious to request permission from the Government of India to renew the project. Once the permission had been granted, he advised, then it would be possible to request funding. I followed his advice and the authorization was granted by the GOA in the spring of 1993. After that I launched numerous requests for funding with practically no success until, finally, in July of 1994 The American Institute of Indian Studies granted me a short-term award with stipend and research support for four months. (Since it had previously seemed likely that I would be able to bring some kind of closure to the VLCP, during the fall of 1993 and the spring of 1994 I was able to obtain from the American University College of Arts and Sciences a research grant to support a student's work in entering on diskettes the alphabetical catalogue referred to above.)

Thereafter, with the realization that I could not undertake anything like the large scale project of the original Smithsonian grant, I decided that the most useful thing to do in India would be to begin annotation of selected works from the existing microfilm collection. India would be the place where I could find the technical linguistic competence to be able to carry out such work. Thus, when I finally left for India in February of 1995, I brought with me over one hundred microfilm rolls of the duplicate set that had been made from the originals on file in the archives of the Bender Library of the American University. Some of these films had been reviewed by Mr. Brian Marvin over a several year period; so I had the results of his evaluation of film quality to start my own work through his annotations on the file boxes of the microfilms.

My first idea had been to go to Pune to the Deccan College language centre for assistance from its staff. However, projected costs for the work there proved too prohibitive in the terms of my small AIIS award; hence, I changed the venue to the Adyar Library and Research Centre of the Theosophical Society in Madras where I had frequently visited previously and was well-acquainted with both living and working conditions.

My work began at the Adyar Library and Research Centre under the sponsorship of Dr. K. Kunjunni Raja, the Honorary Director of the Library, and retired Professor of Sanskrit of Madras University. I had thought to start out by selecting a hundred works from the two to three thousand in the collection for close description and annotation. I examined the Adyar Library manuscript catalogues and consulted with Dr. Raja on a daily basis to determine the best procedure to accomplish this. The Adyar Library had acquired a Minolta Reader-printer of recent vintage. This was in the microphotography section of the Library. The microphotography section was currently not in production because of problems with a camera. As a consequence, I had nearly exclusive use of the facility throughout the period of the the four-month grant.

In the first couple of weeks of my work there I tried the approach of having a Sanskrit scholar to copy out the first and last pages of the works for the later annotation. The person who was training for this work suddenly left because of a family illness. This gave me the opportunity to reconsider the purpose and methodology of the project. Since we had both printed works and manuscripts to deal with, it was obvious that there were different concerns of accessibility and dissemination.

For some weeks subsequently, I worked by myself in the microfilm lab, progressing through the works in numerical order. I began to see that what was actually needed in this phase of the project was to do a complete survey—insofar as possible—of the whole collection. (The meticulous work of the alphabetical bibliography, referred to above, was difficult in some ways to coordinate with the bibliographic records of the actual film rolls.)

The procedure of establishing the "Finite Catalogue," as I have come to call it, gradually emerged as follows:

1. We set the goal of photocopying the bibliographic record page and the first and the last one or two pages of each work itself; to provide information regarding the author, commentators—if any—scribe, and the like. (A considerable amount of the research money for the project went toward paying the Adyar Library its customary photocopy charge of Rs. 1.50 per frame. I also paid for Minolta service charges during the period of the grant.)
2. These pages were then gathered together in files, according to roll number and roll sequence number. (The number of works varies from roll to roll, depending on their length.)
3. We made a series of files and numbered them in Roman numeral sequence.
4. When all the rolls we had, had been seen, and the printouts filed appropriately, we counted the number of works to appear in the initial catalogue: 1,045 (now 1,679).
5. We surveyed the number of different languages by works and indicated this with the aggregate number of works per file. It is a common phenomenon in South India for Sanskrit to be written in other scripts besides Devanāgarī. We include among our collection examples of this in Tulu-Malayalam, Telugu, Grantha and Kannada. We also have vernacular works in Hindi, Braj Bhāṣā, Bengali, and Gujarati to name some of them.

In the course of developing the "Finite Catalogue," I hired Mr. S.A. Lokesh to do the printing of bibliographic record pages and first and last pages and to be general research assistant. Although not a Sanskritist, he was a young scholar with excellent command of English and with good knowledge of Tamil, Marathi and Sanskrit. Dr. S. Jayasree was hired to check the accuracy of author and title against the bibliographic records and sample pages in Sanskrit. She also reads Grantha and Hindi. Other scholars will be needed for reviewing records in Telugu, Bengali, Gujarati, as mentioned above; since not all of the Vaiṣṇava works are in Sanskrit, irrespective of the script.

Although the project has been temporarily interrupted, progress has already been made in entering data by hand into notebooks from which the finite catalogue will be created. The formula used is that of the Adyar Library Manuscript Catalogue system. (Because of Government of India regulations for funding purposes, the Adyar Catalogue is printed in columns across two pages—spread-sheetwise. This will probably not be done in the present catalogue):

1. Serial number
2. Roll and roll sequence number
3. Author
4. Title
5. Commentator
6. Material (palmleaf, paper, et. al.)
7. Language
8. Script
9. Size (length and width)
10. Folios
11. Pages/leaves
12. Condition and age
13. Additional particulars

Since we have already preserved the books and manuscripts of this collection through microphotography, some of the Adyar Library categories should be interpreted as applying to the special conditions of microphotographed works. (In actual fact, the Catalogue, as it now exists, includes mainly information under numbers 1 to 8 in the list above but not always in every instance.)

In conclusion I should say that the second phase of this microfilm project, called Vaiṣṇava Literature Conservation Project II, is not finished. I left India in July to return to the United States for the following, among other reasons: (a) the AIIS grant was nearly finished—although on the eve of my departure, an unexpected additional month's stipend, sans research expenses, was allocated at Smithsonian request. When I return, I will somehow have to manage to complete the work to the fullest extent possible with available funding, which I have been seeking to augment; (b) I felt that I needed, at least, a laptop computer and diskettes to enter the catalogue in a format that could be scrutinized by my Indian collaborators on the scene. I am happy to report that, since my return, through the good offices of Dr. William Deadweiler and the BBT, a laptop has been given to me on loan, with Words Perfect 5. 1 installed so the I can do that work more efficiently at the most convenient location. I am very grateful for that. (c) While working at the Adyar Library, I became aware of certain other aspects of American-Indian cooperation in the area of library resources, and while in the United States, in these past several months, I have tried to develop some of that area of the overall issue of conservation and accessibility, including the Vaiṣṇava Literature conservation Projects.

I am sure that everyone here will agree that Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada's insight and intuition, regarding the intellectual flowering of his own Kṛṣṇa devotees and followers, should not be forfeited. This small project, I believe, has a positive roll to play in this, as well as in more general ways. In his introduction to the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam, Prabhupada wrote:

> Many devotees of Lord Caitanya like Śrīla Vṛndāvana Dāsa Ṭhākura, Śrī Locana Dāsa Ṭhākura, Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, Śrī Kavikarṇapūra, Śrī Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī, Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, Śrī Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī, Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, Śrī Raghunātha Dāsa Gosvāmī and in this latter age within [the last] two hundred years, Śrī Viśvanātha Cakravartī, Śrī Baladeva Vidyābhūṣana, Śrī Śyāmānanda Gosvāmī, Śrī Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura, Śrī Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura and at last Śrī Bhaktisiddhānta

Sarasvatī Ṭhākura (our spiritual master), and many other great and renowned scholars and devotees of the Lord, have prepared voluminous books and literatures on the life and precepts of the Lord. Such literatures are...based on the śāstras...the Vedas, Purāṇas, Upaniṣads, Rāmāyaṇa, Mahābhārata and other histories and authentic literatures approved by the recognized ācāryas. They are unique in composition and unrivaled in presentation, and they are full of transcendental knowledge. Unfortunately, the people of the world are still ignorant of them, but when these literatures come to light the world, and when they are presented before thinking people, then India's glory and the message of love will overflood this morbid world, which is vainly searching after peace and prosperity by various illusory methods not approved by the ācāryas in the chain of disciplic succession.

*Please note that we have found there is a duplication between items 1024-1047 and 1485-1507. This came about in the copying and transfer of rolls from The American University Library Archives' master copy to the Adyar Library where the research necessary for the production of this Catalogue was carried out. Rather than renumber the whole collection it seemed more prudent to keep the duplicate copies in the collection for those exceptional occasions when use of both copies may be required. We believe that most other anomalies have been accounted for in the appropriate place.

Dear Charles,

Many thanks for the copy of the catalog The Adyar Library and Institute for Vaiṣṇava Studies Microfilm Collection of Vaiṣṇava Literature. We will be cataloging it and adding it to the Library's permanent collections. This is a very valuable collection of material on a family of religious movements

* The copy below is the letter, solicited from Dr. Allen W. Thrasher, Senior Reference Librarian of the Southern Asian Section of the Library of Congress, as a review of the Catalogue at the time that he wrote it. It is his professional opinion and is not meant as any form of endorsement of this project by the Library of Congress. We hope that the collection of old Vaiṣṇava books and manuscripts and the bibliographic rescue, represented in this Catalogue, will be of use to the interested scholarly community.

than which there is no more influential one in India. I am very happy to hear that American University is going to make archival copies of the microfilms and keep them in its permanent collections.

As I said, I searched all the items on four randomly chosen pages by author and title, including various guesses of alternative forms. The total of the items searched was 78, and of these only 15 appeared in any form in the Library of Congress online catalog. This is but 19% of the total. Of the 15 seven were printed books, but LC had only 2 of these in the edition filmed. The remaining 8 were manuscripts of which LC had printed editions or another manuscript copy. These figures illustrate the rarity of the materials.

I might add that very few Indian texts have had truly critical editions, and the capturing of multiple manuscript or printed editions in film is a major contribution to making truly critical editions possible. Commercial printed editions are significant testimonia to regional versions of the texts or to lost manuscripts. At LC we have not shrunk from acquiring multiple editions of works in both the classical and the modern languages.

I also think this material will in fact get used. I regularly have inquiries about Vaisnava texts that are not in LC and do not appear in the online union catalog OCLC, which includes most of the research libraries in North America and a steadily growing number elsewhere.

As I mentioned I think the catalog as it is should be supplemented by alphabetical indexes of authors and titles. Another obvious thing would be to put the indexes list on a website and to make a CD-ROM of it. (I am a firm believer in continuing to put information in paper which in my opinion is a lot more permanent than websites, and CD-ROMs which are some by some real but unspecifiable degree more permanent.)

Sincerely,

Allen Thrasher

VAIṢṆAVĪ

Women and the Worship of Krishna

Ed. by Steven J. Rosen

This volume explores the delicate subject of gender and religion with honesty and clarity—focusing on one of mankind's earliest and most textually-rich religious traditions: Vaishnavism. Steven J. Rosen has brought together eight essays by leading academics, poets and practitioners, who shed light on the lives and teachings of specific female saints throughout history. This book also examines general principles regarding the worship of Krishna and how such principles impact on the lives of both men and women today.

VAIṢṆAVISM

Its Philosophy Theology and Religious Discipline

S.M.S. Chari

This is scholarly book on one of the oldest living religions of India. Tracing the basic tenets of Vaiṣṇavism to the hymns of Rgveda, the author has shown how an ancient cult has developed itself by successive stages into a well-formulated monotheistic system. The book contains the fundamental philosophical theories of Viśiṣṭādvaita Vedānta and discussion on theological doctrines of Vaiṣṇavism, and on religious discipline and ethical values.

VAIṢṆAVISM

Contemporary Scholars Discuss the Gauḍīya Tradition

Ed. by Steven J. Rosen

Vaiṣṇavism: Contemporary Scholars Discuss the Gauḍīya Tradition focuses on an ancient religious heritage in the light of modern scholarship. Through a series of lively conversation, Steven J. Rosen and twenty-five distinguished academics explore the many sides of Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇavism—its literature, historical development, theology and practice. Thoughtful and indeep illuminating perspectives emerge as the scholars reveal insights gained from years of research. In discussing subjects such as the nature of the Absolute, devotional poetry, sacred space, mystical states and sonic theology, the abundant beauty and profundity of this venerable East Indian tradition is brought to light.
